CONTRACT SIGNED WITH OEO TO DIRECT 2000 PROGRAMS THROUGHOUT U.S.

AAP Launches Head Start Medical Consultation Program

The American Academy of Pediatrics has undertaken a major community health responsibility to insure that health services provided Head Start children throughout the country adequately meet the health needs of these children, their families, and their communities.

Under a contract signed with the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity, the AAP will organize and direct the Medical Consultation Program of Head Start child development programs in nearly 2,000 communities in the United States.

The Academy has chosen Robert S. Mendelsohn, M.D., F.A.A.P., a pediatrician from Chicago, and formerly medical director, Project Head Start, Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity, to direct the program.

Sargent Shriver Comments

Commenting on the program, Sargent Shriver, director of OEO, welcomed the wholehearted support offered to the program by the AAP, which now represents more than 10 thousand pediatricians in the U.S., Canada, and Latin America. The AAP, to a large extent, has set the standards for child health care both in this country and abroad.

Mr. Shriver stressed that this contract represents a new type of relationship between an agency of the Federal Government and a voluntary professional organization.

Consultants

Initially, the AAP will select about 300 physician consultants from its membership, and from among other leaders in the field of child health, to evaluate the medical aspects of Head Start programs at the state and local level.

As more of these physicians gain experience in working in community health programs, their increased skills and knowledge will make their advice more valuable in planning and carrying out those programs requiring cooperation between physicians and government agencies.

Duties

Each medical consultant selected will work with the medical director and other health professionals in Head Start projects.

He will review the medical aspects of Head Start applications submitted by a community; meet with local planning committees to map out Head Start medical programs; maintain contact with program medical directors; follow up and evaluate programs, and maintain liaison with OEO regional and national offices.

Consultants will work with the Office of Economic Opportunity representatives responsible for funding and evaluating Head Start health programs, helping them interpret the needs of the children, the resources of the community, and the success of Head Start programs. The consultant will supplement rather than replace the medical and administrative skills available in each community.

AAP Responsibilities

In addition to choosing local and state Head Start consultants, the Academy, at the national level, will assume major responsibilities to effectively coordinate and administer the program.

These responsibilities will include:

- Assigning continuing Head Start projects to consultants.
- Setting up a reimbursement system for consultant services and expenses.
- Establishing a supervisory system to assure effective use of Head Start consultants.
- Maintaining records of consultation activities and costs.
- Tabulating and evaluating consultant reports, and
- Developing and staffing a national Head Start Advisory Committee for the AAP Medical Consultation Service.

Commenting on the program, William S. Anderson, M.D., F.A.A.P., Academy president, pointed out that "the Academy Executive Board and staff are enthusiastic
